FOR PRESIDENT,

FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

OF PENNSYLVANIA
Subject to the Decision of the Republican National Convention.

Sherman's Tribute to the Army—Speech at St. Louis.

The second annual meeting of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, which occurred last week in St Louis, was a grand affair The principal address was delivered by General Sherman, who was enabled to be present by the kindness of General Augur, who volunteered to represent him at an Indian council at Fort Laramie We make some extracts from his speech

It was not for all of us to celebrate that day, July 4, 1863—in wine and rejoicing, for some of us had to content ourselves with water taken from those dirty ponds which Jackson poisoned by the dead carcases of a fleeing army, but others of you did behold our flag arise on that white court house in Vicksburg, which had so long been the target for our artillery, and that other scene of exquisite interest, when every gunboat and every steamer came pouring out from nook and cove above, and from the dark waters of the deadly Yazoo, and hurried down to that levee where for so long a time they had been strangers

"I have often thought in my dreams of the 'Luminary,' bright as a fairy decked off with her flags and steaming down the turbed waters of the Mississippi proclaiming to the world that that great river was again free, and that her waters went unvexed to the sea' * * * * * *

"But the end was not yet Our comrade army of the Cumberland, far away in the mountains of East Tennessee, called for help, and we had to go Through forest, over river, through the mud and over the rocks, we paused not till Lookout Mountain with its rebel batteries frowned down upon us and upon our beleaguered comrades in Chattanooga You remember I was summoned ahead of you to meet General Grant in Chattanooga, and I recall my feelings, standing with him on the parapet of Fort Wood, he pointed out to me the circling rebel camps, with their pickets walking their posts in clear, broad daylight close up to our lines Then realized that our troops were closely besieged, and that our General unaccustomed to such close quarters only awaited your arrival to cut the Gordian knot and set his army free

"So impatient was he that after receiving his orders I hastened back to meet you at Bridgeport, pulling in one myself one bright moonlight night down those thirty miles of river, and without allowing you a moment's rest I hurried you forward You know the sequel how we passed behind those hills, and laid that pontoon bridge below Chattanooga at night, and hostily marched to the top of Mission Ridge, the prolongation of Bragg's line of investment Clearly there was not room for us both, and one of us had to quit We had not the remotest intention of going and Bragg fell into the very trap which our General had set for him He drew from his centre as against us to such an extent that Thomas, with the Army of the Cumberland, burst out of his old intrenchments and swept the rebel host off that Mission Ridge and pursued not till the broken fragments had escaped beyond Ringold Gap, leaving us masters in East Tennessee valley

* * * "I have always wished that some artist like Bierstadt or Kaulfman could have stood by my side on Kenesaw that beautiful October morning and fixed on canvass that beautiful picture of the vast forest at our feet with its light intermixed foliage and the long lines of soldiers pointing towards Dalton whilst in the far off distance was Altoona, begirt with the white smoke of the rebel assault, and the ever-loud g'impse of the little signal flag through an embrasure, which told me, through the skillful officer by my side, that Corse was there and consequently that the place was safe

"Or better still, that Beard or Healy could have caught that glorious picture we took out of Atlanta that beautiful morning in November and turned to look at Atlanta smouldering in its ruins whilst long lines of soldiers, with their white topped wagons, were starting southward they knew not whither, and the whole air resounded with their favorite anthem of 'John Brown's soul goes marching on,' taken up from the band by the marching columns as by a common instinct

"Or who will attempt the scene when Hazen's old division, after long weeks and months of perilous marching down to the sea, walked with colors flying, and dressed by brigades on the centre, right into Fort McAlister, and the loud shouts of his men reached us across those rice fields, and were carried back to our main camps, telling them that our fleet was gained, and that Savannah's fate was sealed [Applause]

* * * "Do you suppose any one can describe to me the bitter anguish of that moment when McPherson, who had just left me in joyous health, was brought back and laid dead at my feet, that terrific yell when the Army of the Tennessee learned that their noble commander, whom they loved so well, would never again be seen in life, and that to them was consigned the dread task of revenge? * * * * * *

"And last of all, when at Raleigh, the sad tidings came and hung over us all for days like a pall, that Mr Lincoln, our beloved President, had been assassinated by the coward villain Booth Even now I tremble when I think what might have befallen the people of Raleigh, had not our men been long schooled in the terrible lessons of a bloody war Oh! how we had all looked forward to that day when he should come forth to meet us, with his tall form and beaming eye, [applause] to welcome us back again to our homes, after our long and devious wanderings, but it was not reserved for him, and another did it in his stead, whilst the whole nation stood by to proclaim with shouts of joy, Well done, good and faithful soldiers, and now, I, your old commander, after a lapse of more than two years, echo the same sentiment, and tell you, you have your reward not in money or precious jewels, not in lands and houses, but in the consciousness of a noble duty well done, and in the possession of those priceless memories that will become more and more precious as time rolls on The day will come when not a man in this land of ours but would shout with joy his wealth, could he say, like you, that he, too, was of the Army of the Tennessee [cheers], and could tell his children that he heard the first hostile shot at Fort Henry and the last boom of cannon at Raleigh

"I recall a little circumstance in Memphis in the summer of 1863 We were lying in camp, drilling in preparation for the coming winter, when I was visited by a gentleman of high education a captain then, and now Admiral Tissoffski, of the Russian navy, who accompanied me in many drills and reviews, always complimenting our men on their soldierly appearance On one occasion we rode into the camp of Barrett's battery, and we timed them from the call of assembly till the battery was harnessed up and out in the field ready for action He was pleased at their promptness I explained that our men were not professional soldiers but had been mechanics, clerks and laborers only a few months before He seemed to admit that was possible but he said What will you do with these men when the war is over? I answered, They will all quietly and peacefully return to their homes. He shook his head, and did not believe me. I have no doubt that he has since given us, as a people, full credit for this result, to him and to all European as enigmatical in its character Yes, our men have returned to their homes in peace and quiet, and go where I may, I meet them all more or less busy at their varied callings Instead of the great art of destruction they are now practising that better art of construction. Dodge, guiding the Pacific railroad (that stupendous monument of the energy and resources of our people) across the Rocky Mountains. Casement laying his two miles of rails per day. Wright seeking out the way for the Southern Pacific road Sprague, on the north, building westward Corse constructing harbors on the great lakes Blair and Warren planting cotton at the south. Wilson delving out the Mississippi and planning to make of the Illinois river a navigable canal, but by the great labor of the North, and turn which way we may we find our comrades busy, their swords turned into pruning hooks Each planting his own vine and fig tree, and no man afraid'

Miss Dickinson's Explanation.

Miss Anna Dickinson, in her recent lecture in Boston, gives, in her pleasant way, the following version of her alleged rude conduct on board the School ship lying at that port Her explanation sets the matter in quite a different light from that in which it was held up in a Boston paper She said

"I find there is a story going the rounds of the Boston and New England press, to this effect —that a Sunday or so ago, I went down to the School ship, and under cover of my good and long tried friend, Judge Russell, and that then and there I took violent possession of a book which I knew to be the property of the Commonwealth or of Captain Matthews—(I will tell you for the benefit of those who may be so ignorant as not to know that this gentleman is the Captain of the School ship)—that I took violent possession of this book, and, after magnificently penning my own name, intending to insult both the Captain and the Commonwealth marked out the name of Andrew Johnson, which I found upon another page"

The actual statement of the case is this

"That going down to the School ship and having a pleasant morning there, a little while before I left it, the teacher of the ship handed me an autograph book exactly like thousands of others in which I have written, and supposing it to be a private autograph book belonging to him, I wrote my name therein Turning over the pages I came to one scoled by the name of Andrew Johnson, and holding my dry pen in the air, made a little playful flourish over it, when he (whom I supposed to be the owner of the book) said to me 'If you will mark your pen across that with ink, it will add greatly to the value of the book,' and I doing what I supposed would gratify a man, supposed to be the owner of the book, did to Andrew Johnson's name what the whole loyal nation would gladly do with his infamous record and himself—blot it out [Applause] So much for that I wish the man was as easily ended as his name was in that case, and I believe, may I know, that the great mass of the loyal people in the country say amen to any such desire"

The Chicago Tribune.

From the William Port (Ind) Republican.

This is one of the oldest and most reliable Republican papers in the Northwest It is a staunch advocate for the nomination of Grant for the next President, and for the readmission of all the seceded States into the Union as speedily as possible, but with this provision, that loyal men alone be allowed to participate in the management of reconstruction This we think is sound doctrine

To the Tribune, perhaps, more than any other one publication, belongs the credit of acquainting the public at large with the intrinsic merits of Abraham Lincoln, and of influencing his nomination for President During his administration, the Tribune was zealous in the support of the great principles he endeavored to carry out—it was in advocate for the vigilant prosecution of the war—for the speedy and effectual subjugation of the rebels, and when this was effected, for the restoration of the whole Union upon a basis just and honorable Now it is as zealous in its advocacy of General Grant for President in 1868, and deserves much credit for its bold and outspoken sentiments in favor of human equality, and a just enforcement of the laws of the land We admire its enthusiasm for Grant If ever we needed a man of proved and tried integrity, of sound and discrimination judgment, to hold the reins of this government, it is now If ever there were threatened dangers to assert, surely it is now more than at any time since we were a nation Many of our contemporaries have already hoisted the name of a brave and gallant son of Illinois for our next President, and are pressing his claims with undiminished and marked ability, and we doubt not that Grant will be the people's choice, and that he will be elected by an overwhelming majority Let us not then, sleep upon our rights, but remember that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty"

Newspapers.

"Thirty years ago" says Wilkes' Spirit "the Orators ruled America, to day it is ruled by the Editors" It adds There is a class of men among bankers and merchants and lawyers who affect a condescension towards the journalist which is intensely amusing The writer for the newspaper appears to their blinking eyes a kind of literary adventurer, who is to be tolerated for his genius, but not be trusted in business They are ignorant that it is the newspaper that sells their goods, furnishes all their facts, and presents them gratuitously with their opinions They do not know as Jay Cooke does, that the newspapers of America sold two thousand millions of National bonds They do not know, as Edwin M Stanton knows, that the newspapers of America sent five hundred thousand men to the war

Advertising People.

Says the Boston Post, "people who advertise are smarter than those who don't, better looking, too, nine in ten This is natural, if not logical Advertising is an indication of intelligence, and intelligence is one of the leading elements of good looks At all events the world believes in those who advertise, and it plants its dollars in their pockets Such are live people, and in those live days nobody wants anything to do with any but your live men and women Our advice to everybody—except in matrimony—is to advertise It is sure to return largely, increase your reputation as a business man, make hosts of friends, and add to the number of shrewd and sensible people in the world, of which there has never yet been an over stock"

The steamship City of Cork had fourteen deaths from cholera on the passage among steerage passengers, and, now has ten cases aboard There was no sickness among the cabin passengers. The vessel was sent to lower quarantine, at New York

During the recent fair at Sacramento, the city is said to have been one vast gambling hell All nationalities and all classes of society entered into the dangerous sport with the most utter disregard of everything but how they might become suddenly rich.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.

The Senate met at noon. Prayer by the Chaplain. Senators present—The President, Messrs. Anthony, Cameron, Cattell, Chandler Conness, Cole, Corbett, Conkling, Craigin, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Drake, Edmunds, Fessenden, Fowler, Frelinghuysen, Grimes, Harlan, Johnson, Jordan, Morrill, of Vt., Morrill, of Me., Morton, Norton, N. Y., Patterson, of N. H., Patterson, of Tenn., Pomeroy, Ramsey, Rose, Sherman, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Tipton, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Willey, Williams, Wilson and Yates.

Mr. Sumner asked unanimous consent to introduce a bill for the further security of equal rights in the District of Columbia. He stated it was an exact copy of the bill passed at the last session, but not returned by the President in time to become necessary again to pass it. The bill reads as follows: Be it enacted, &c., that the word "white" wherever it occurs in laws relating to the District of Columbia or in the charter or ordinance of the city of Washington and Georgetown, and once or twice a limitation on said cities to hold any office or to be selected and serve as jurors, be the same is hereby repealed, and it shall be unlawful for any person or officer to enforce or attempt to enforce said limitation after the passing of this bill.

Mr. Davis objecting, the bill was laid over.

Mr. Williams introduced a joint resolution amendatory to joint resolution approved June 25th, 1866, authorizing the Court of Claims to reopen and examine for adjudication, the claims of Richard W. Mead, deceased. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Edmunds offered the following joint resolution, which was received, laid on the table, and ordered printed. He would call it up at an early day, and hoped it would be passed with entire unanimity.

Whereas, The national debt of the United States was, except where specially otherwise provided, contracted and incurred upon the faith and credit of the United States, that the same would be paid or redeemed in coin of its equivalent, therefore,

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the public debt of the United States, except in the cases wherein the law authorizing the same, other provision was expressly made, is owing in coin, or its equivalent, and the United States is hereby pledged to payment accordingly.

Mr. Wilson offered the following, which was agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to communicate for the information of the Senate, any facts or reports in possession of that Department, relating to the repeal of the tax on cotton.

Mr. Grimes moved that when the Senate adjourn it be to Monday. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Morgan, it was ordered the Senate meet at 12 m., daily.

On motion of Mr. Wilson, the bill for the calling out of volunteers to suppress hostilities, and the bill vacating certain municipal offices in Alexandria, were indefinitely postponed.

Adjourned.

HOUSE.

The House assembled at noon, the attendance being unusually large. The galleries were crowded before eleven o'clock, and many ladies were accommodated in the gentlemen's gallery. Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, was in his seat, apparently in as good physical condition as at last session.

Proceedings were opened with prayer by Chaplain Baynton.

Messrs. Woodward, of Pennsylvania, and Cary, of Ohio, members elect, took the oath prescribed by law.

The eight members elect from Tennessee having been called by the Speaker to take the oath, Mr. Eldridge objected to administering the oath to Mr. Stokes and moved that his credentials be referred to the Committee on Credentials.

Mr. James Brooks, of New York, objected to administering the oath to any of the Tennessee delegates on the ground, first, that two, if not more of them, have been guilty of treason to the Government and taken the oath of allegiance to the confederate government and Jeff Davis, and in second, there does not now exist in the State of Tennessee a republican form of government.—[Loud laughter.] On the Republican side Brooks argued that the electoral law of Tennessee disfranchises a majority of the white citizens; the whole vote of the State was 140,000, and yet 100,000 voters had controlled the election, 55,000 of whom were negroes, thus controlling the 45,000 white voters who were not disfranchised. An oligarchy now exists and reigns in Tennessee.—The franchise law there was a disgrace to our free form of government, a dishonor to civilization, and a reprobation to all forms of self government. Mr. Brooks then stated his special objections to the swearing in of Mr. Butler, because, as a member of the Tennessee Legislature before and during the rebellion, he had introduced, supported and voted for resolutions and measures proving his disloyalty to the United States Government. Among these were resolutions to reject the confirmation of any man to office who indorsed the "Helper Book," condemning the appointment of Seward in Lincoln's Cabinet as an act of hostility to the South and for calling a convention to take Tennessee out of the Union.—Mr. Brooks quoted the precedent established by the Republican side of the House last July in regard to the Kentucky members, and argued they were now bound by it. Mr. Brooks then objected to the swearing in of Mr. Mullins on the ground that he had given aid and comfort to the rebellion, has made speeches in behalf of it, had lent his aid and support to it, had attempted to raise troops for it, and made a speech in Bedford county in 1861 in which he urged the young men to enlist in a rebel company and defend their homes and their firesides. Mr. Brooks also objected to the swearing in of Arnell on the ground that he had established in Lawrence county, Tennessee, a manufactory which was devoted to supplying shoes to rebel soldiers. Mr. Brooks also objected to the swearing in of Mr. Trimble, saying his information was that if he had voted at all on the question of secession he had voted for taking Tennessee out of the Union.

Mr. Eldridge then stated to the House the grounds on which he objected to the swearing in of Mr. Stokes; it was that Mr. Stokes had admitted in the House, on the 27th of July, 1866, to having written a letter to John Duncan on the 10th of May, 1861, stating that he understood some gross misrepresentations were going the rounds of his section in reference to his position which he, (Stokes,) wished to correct; that he had been a zealous advocate of the Union up to the time Lincoln had called for 75,000 troops, in violation of the law, for the subjugation of the South; that he commended Gov. Harris, of Tennessee, for his course of arming the State and resisting Lincoln at the point of the bayonet, and he had enrolled his name as a volunteer to resist Lincoln's usurpations.

Mr. Logan expressed his gratification at seeing the members on the Democratic side coming up to the mark. He was willing to have the matter of Butler referred, but as to Stokes, he thought if any man could wipe out a wrong, that noble man Stokes had wiped out the wrong of that letter in fighting for the Union while some gentlemen were publishing treasonable articles.

Mr. Dawes, of Mass., moved as a substitute, for the pending motion, that the credentials of Butler be referred to the Committee on Elections, and pending the discussion of the question he be not sworn in. He (Dawes) understood the gentleman from New York to make his motion in good faith, and he assumed that the gentleman had made wonderful progress since the last session, when he put himself on the ground that no charge of disloyalty, however flagrant and published, was a sufficient ground for the exclusion of a member who had a certificate of election. He congratulated the country on this wonderful conversion; he trusted Brooks would continue on his journey until he saw more clearly, even than the members on the Republican side, what did constitute loyalty and disloyalty. The gentleman had also taken the ground to-day that it was proper for the House to look into the Constitution of a State and decide whether it is Republican or not; he was happy for once to be able to stand with the gentleman from New York and vote with him; he welcomed him as a new convert and expected him like all representatives, to take the lead and do the works meet for repentance.

Mr. Kelly, of Pa., opposed all motions looking to the exclusion of any Tennessee members, and eulogized the character and services of Stokes. He wished the members of the South to know it was the party on the floor which did not acknowledge any place or time for repentance; which could not relieve them of disfranchisement, not for rebellion, but the holding of opinions in 1861, which they held to-day on the subject and of States rights and the degradation of the colored people.

After some further remarks by Dawes and Chandler of New York, Marshall of Ill., expressed his conviction that the qualifications prescribed in the Constitution were the only test that could apply to the members, but since the House has established a different law for its own act it should be governed by it. He described the State government of Tennessee as a disgrace to the country and to civilization and said it was a notorious fact that Union soldiers in Tenn., had been disfranchised under the Brownlow Government simply because they would not put their mouths in the dust and kneel supplicant to the negro government there which was lording it over white American freemen.

The amendment of Mr. Davis to refer to the credentials of Mr Butler to the Committee on Elections was agreed to. This was a substitute for the original motion of Mr. Eldridge, the effect of it being to refer Butler's case, not that of Stokes. The Democrats generally voted no on agreeing to the resolution as amended and the negative vote of Brooks was received with laughter and remarks that he would have to be converted again.

Messrs. Higby, Axtell and Johnson, of Cal., and Washburn, of Ill., appeared and were sworn in.

Mr. Eldridge then recalled his motion that the credentials of Mr. Stokes be referred to the Committee on Elections.

Mr. Schenck, said he wanted no more of this sort of thing. The member from N. Y., had just shown by his vote that he had been trifling with the House, proving his object was to set some party trap which, however, sprung and caught himself, then for the purpose of grave inquiry into the right of a seat. He was glad the House, in the case of Mr Mullins, had carried out the precedent established in the Ky. case by not giving credit to the statement of a member (Brooks) to which his own conduct showed him not entitled as he had voted against his own proposition. He was opposed to a reference of Mr. Stokes' credentials as that gentleman has shown his loyalty by fighting under the flag.

Mr. Morgan inquired if the fact that Stokes had fought valiantly under the flag entitled him to take a test oath.

Mr. Schenck replied that he was not the conscience-keeper of Stokes; that that matter was entirely for himself.

Mr. Randall contrasted the action of the Republican members in the Kentucky case with their present action, and asked how they could reconcile their practical inconsistencies.

Mr. Dawes closed the debate by moving the previous question, which was seconded and the resolution of Mr. Eldridge rejected, so Stokes' credentials were not referred.

Mr. Brooks then submitted a resolution to refer the credentials of Mr. Mullins to the Committee on Elections and sent to the Clerk's desk a letter from a Lieutenant in the 12th United States Infantry, supporting the statement made in respect to this case. Referring to the remark of Mr. Logan, he said the only difference between Logan and himself was that at the beginning of the war Logan was a terrible Copperhead and himself a Union man, while now Mr. Logan was a terrible disunion man and a Jacobin and himself still a Union man. As to the remarks of Mr Schenck, that gentleman was not a very amiable person; he had not that suavity of manner which as a student of Chesterfield, he ought to have; he was the regular scold of the House. Mr. Brooks then defended his course in regard to the subject before the House.

Mr. Shellabarger said he would not discuss the proposition whether the House might disregard the requirements of test oath law. The House would be doing a most dangerous thing if it let down the high and important requirements of the test oath and members on either side should hold it up in the utmost good faith as the standard to which the law had fixed it, and require that virtuous shall be brought to bear to see that no one shall be sworn in who could not properly take it. He would not consent to his colleagues's (Schenck's) proposition that Mr. Stokes should judge for himself whether he could take the test oath.

Mr. Schenck explained and justified his remarks. Having referred in the case of Senator Patterson, he said he would have permitted him to take the oath, but would have the next moment moved to expel him for manifest perjury.

Mr. Shellabarger resuming, argued that the resolution to refer Mullins's credentials should be adopted.

Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, opposed the resolution on the ground principally that the charge against Mr. Mullins was made simply on an unsworn statement contained in a letter.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.

Caucusing.

Some members are to-night talking about a caucus to-morrow night, but it is a foregone conclusion that the House will adjourn to-morrow till Monday, and that as little business can be done this session there does not seem to be any occasion for one. Some members, however, are anxious to forestall the action of the House on impeachment.

The Trial of Jeff Davis.

District Attorney Chandler, of Virginia, who is still here, says that Jeff Davis is expected to reach Richmond to-morrow night, and that he (Chandler) knows of no reason why the trial cannot proceed next week.

Grant's Reports.

Grant's reports have been completed and submitted some days, and are the first of the Department reports ready for the President.

Chief Justice Chase

The Chief Justice gives considerable attention to financial matters. He thinks the time not far distant when the Government will have returned to specie payments, and when he considers all the United States bonds will be redeemed in specie. On the subject of a uniform currency the world over he is at present much interested, and also thinks that the banking system of this country will be adopted by the rest of the world. He considers the experiment here has proven its practicability.

Mr. Kelsey's Bill.

Kelsey, one of the ablest lawyers in the House, has prepared a bill to introduce, the effect of which is to suspend officials while being tried for impeachment.

NEW YORK.

News from Mexico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.

The Herald's Havana special says. Admiral Teghoff had received a very polite letter from the Mexican Minister, tendering an escort of Government troops for Maximilian's body to Vera Cruz, at the national expense. All public demonstration, however, both on Mexican soil and within Mexican maritime jurisdiction, were forbidden.

Congress convened on the 20th, when there were a quorum of representatives present.

President Juarez was preparing a defence of the use which he made of the discretionary powers. It had been stated that he asked for the forces belonging to Escobedo's command, which are to come to the capital. The reasons of this demand are left unexplained, but it is surmised that it is owing to the large force, said to be about fourteen thousand men and three hundred pieces of artillery, which General Diaz has at his command.

Alcohan, who has been some time a resident of Vera Cruz, says he foresees another revolution in Mexico, probably about next January.

General Merino was assassinated on the Coal Camino road.

Efforts to Secure Prize Money.

About two hundred officers and men who served in the fleets of Admiral Farragut and Porter at the fall of New Orleans, met last evening for the purpose of devising measures to recover eight millions of dollars prize money, to which they conceive they and their comrades are entitled.—An organization was completed and contributions made to a fund to carry out the objects.

Collector Wood.

Wood, the newly appointed Collector of the Third Internal Revenue District, took possession of his office Tuesday afternoon and made a clean sweep of deputies and clerks. He appointed his deputy a lawyer who has defended many parties whose stills have been seized for being run in violation of the Internal Revenue laws.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD,
TITUSVILLE, Nov. 21, 1867—10 P. M.

There was a shade firmer feeling observable in the Petroleum market to-day, although there was but little activity. The inquiry was fair. On Pioneer Run offers were made at $2 00 delivered. At Gregg's Switch an offer was made at $2 00 delivered. At Petroleum Centre offers were made at $1 90 and $2 00 delivered. The sales were as follows: 500 barrels on Benninghoff Hill, from the Mary Ann well, on private terms; a round lot on the McClintock Reserve, at $2 00 at the wells; 650 barrels on Benninghoff Hill, in two lots, on private terms. The more favorable feeling observable in the market to-day was undoubtedly owing to an increased demand for the Cleveland market. On Change at Petroleum Centre there were no transactions. Offers were made at $1 85, $1 90 and $2 00 delivered on the cars at Petroleum Centre.

At Oil City the market was firmer but irregular. The sales were as follows: Twelve car loads delivered on broad gauge cars, for the Cleveland market, on private terms; a lot delivered on narrow gauge cars at $2 30; two small lots, delivered on broad gauge cars at $2 30; twelve car loads for the Cleveland market on private terms. We quote at $2 40 delivered on broad gauge cars.

We quote:

There was considerable excitement on the street this morning by the announcement that the Manufacturers' National Bank had failed, which is without the slightest foundation. Mr. Spartkin, partner of J. K. Pace, was President of the bank, but resigned after the failure of the firm of J. M. Carman, who is a man high in the community, was elected in his place. The bank is solvent and meets all demands to-day. State, Place & Co's Hill bills are two millions; assets estimated at about $600,000.

STOCKS—Opened heavy and lower on rumors about the Manufacturers' National Bank, but the market strengthened and declined, recovered somewhat but weakened and closed heavy and lower, though the decline was not marked.

PAYNE'S BARREL FILLER!

Important to

OIL REFINERS & DISTILLERS!

W. S. PAYNE'S IMPROVED SELF-CLOSING AUTOMATIC BARREL FILLER

Was patented September 10 1867, and has just been introduced in the Oil Region. The advantages gained by the use of the Filler are

1st. SAVING OF TIME.—The Filler being so constructed that advantage is taken of the full pressure of the Oil or Liquid as it flows from the tank, the barrel is filled in from one half to one fourth the time required by the usual process, and the Filler being so adjusting the workman engaged in filling may be engaged in arranging or branding the barrel already filled, the Filler shutting off the flow of liquid, just at the right time, far more accurately than could be done by any workman.

2d. The employment of a Gauge, perfectly simple, but so arranged that the barrel may be filled to any required height, and then at once closed to any oil or liquid, or any external pressure, and that by its own action, being in this respect, a perfect automaton, and rendering the use of a "chief" entirely unnecessary.

3. The barrel never overflows, thereby a one often saving in a single day, more than the cost of the Filler. This filler is designed to be used for filling Casks, Tanks, Cisterns, Water Tanks of Locomotives, and in general all vessels or receptacles that are to be filled with liquids. Its object is to economize labor. One man with this filler being able to accomplish the work of four men without it. One man can easily attend to six of these instruments without work thus accomplishing the work of four to six men operating the old way. An engineer with this instrument can sit in operation and then go about his business leaving his engine at work, when the tank is filled, the water will be shut off, and the instrument withdrawn from the tank. It may be used about stores, in filling measures, bottles, &c., and effects a great saving of labor.

The fillers are made in the most substantial manner of the best brass and by gas and steam fitters, and are warranted to give perfect satisfaction.

W. S. PAYNE, M. S. SIMMONS, E. H. BRADY and W. H. DEWITT, are the exclusive owners of the Patent.

Varieties.

—There is to be a select dancing party at the Oil Exchange hotel, Boyd Farm, on Thanksgiving night.

—The Jones House, Harrisburg, was sold on 21st Saturday afternoon to Dr. James Fleming, for $85,000.

—Nearly ten thousand dollars has been subscribed by the citizens of Pittsburgh for the relief of the sufferers by the late explosion.

—There will be a meeting of the Degree Temple of Sugnwaihs Lodge this evening. Candidates for initiation are requested to present themselves at 8 o'clock.

—The Common Council have called a public meeting at City Hall to-morrow night, to discuss the question of purchasing the Crittenden House for an Orphan School.

—The Meadville Republican had intelligence a few days since of the safe arrival of Mr Finney and wife at Southampton. He stood the voyage very well, and is probably now in Paris. Hopes are now entertained of his rapid recovery.

—The HERALD office owns an American flag, which mysteriously disappeared some time ago We have had no use for it since the fall elections, but require it now for a special purpose. If the borrower will loan it to us for a little while we will return it in good order, on demand

—"Why don't you trade with me?" said a close-fisted tradesman to a friend the other day The reply was characteristic: "You have never asked me, sir. I have looked all through the papers for an invitation in the shape of an advertisement, and found none. I never go where I am not invited."

—A Dr. Russell has been arrested at Tidionte, and committed to prison, charged with causing the death of a young girl named Jane Evans, by producing abortion. The physician and one James Hale, also under arrest, narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of the people when the crime was discovered.

Soldiers' Orphans' School.

The State Superintendent has directed the school building to be prepared for one hundred pupils of the advanced grade by the first day of December; fifty new pupils and fifty to be transferred from primary schools in other parts of the State.

It is to be hoped, for the credit of the city, that no unnecessary delay may be made in this matter. There are hundreds of destitute orphans in this district who should at once be allowed the benefit of the State funds appropriated for that purpose.

We rejoice that the honor of distributing this fund for Northwestern Pennsylvania has been accorded to our city. It argues well for our reputation at the State capital, and gives promise of better things and a good time coming.

LECTURES.—We received a letter yesterday from the Lecture Committee of Warren, Pa, asking if "a certain A. P. Barnes (of that place) is figuring in Titusville in the lecture speculating business?" The writer further says: "He (Barnes,) has Josh Billings, and talks about having secured others, and assumes to speak for Corry and Titusville."

Of course Barnes has a right to speculate in any way he pleases, but he has no right to "speak for Corry and Titusville," or any other place that we are aware of. We are sorry Josh has fallen into such hands. He informed us that he had contracted to lecture for Barnes at Corry, Titusville, Meadville, and Erie. Barnes will probably clear his expenses on the undertaking, and if he succeeds elsewhere in getting his bills "discounted," to the extent he did here, he may make a handsome profit besides. We advise Josh, who is not by any means responsible for the shortcomings of his agent, to keep a sharp lookout hereafter, for the sake of his own reputation, and to shake off his business connections with Barnes as soon as possible. The very best of Milk would "sour," under such auspices.

It is proper, under the circumstances, to correct the impression that this lecture was upon the programme of our own Lecture Committee. Such was not the fact, as we have already shown. The introduction of the lecturer to the audience, by a member of the committee, was in compliance with a particular request, which was acceded to as an act of courtesy to Mr. Shaw, (Billings). The Lecture Committee have restricted their invitations to the very best available talent. Mr. B. F. Taylor, who is to lecture here on Friday evening of next week, the 29th instant, is one of the editors of the Chicago Journal, and during the war was the brilliant army correspondent of that paper. He is considered one of the most witty and entertaining, as well as instructive, of our popular lecturers. He speaks upon the appropriate topic of "Letters—their Variety and Character."

Garibaldi.

The miscarriage of the Garibaldian project has produced deep feeling throughout Italy, where sympathy with the "Party of Action" was very general, but the country is reported quiet. The Garibaldians seem to have been treated with tenderness by the Italian soldiers, who sympathize far more with the cause of Italian freedom and unity than with that of the self-appointed dictator, Napoleon. The rumor that Garibaldi's mind has been unsettled by his misfortunes, is probably untrue.

There is always to be found a party opposed to human rights, whether those rights be sustained or opposed by revolution. This party—the same who sympathized with and encouraged the rebellion in the support of slavery in this country—are already assailing Garibaldi in terms almost identical with those with which they denounced Abraham Lincoln for his patriotic defence of the Government of the United States. One of the organs of this party, which won the distinction of a more profound infamy that almost any other in the nation during the war, demands the hanging of Garibaldi, as John Brown was hung by the rebel Gov. Wise, in Virginia, a few years ago. The identity of sentiment of American rebels and their friends with the advocates and supporters of European despotism—standing, as they do, ready to acquit Jeff. Davis and his associates of all crime—is as marked as it is significant.

Whatever the result of this attempt to free the Papal Provinces from the domination of despotism, Garibaldi's fame is secure. He will be remembered by all true friends of liberty as a true patriot, and when Rome shall at last have gained its freedom, the emancipated Roman people will build monuments to his memory, while they execrate the name of the foreign usurper and despot who has assisted to keep them in slavery. Posterity will do justice to his memory, while the cause of Italian freedom and unity, under some other and worthier ruler than he who now disgraces the Italian throne, will rise from its present degradation with a lustre all the brighter because Garibaldi has lived and suffered in its defense

CROCUS IN A "TRANCE"—MADAME ROOTENTOOT'S HOROSCOPE—WOMEN IN THE 20TH CENTURY.—Yesterday our attention was called to a paragraph in a leading journal which reads as follows.

"The ladies of Kansas are about to test the right of suffrage by force of arms."

Also the following:

"Miss Anna E. Dickinson, while visiting the United States Receiving Ship at Boston, 'discovered Andrew Johnson's name upon the Register kept for distinguished names, when she deliberately drew a pen through it, thus erasing it.'

It will be remembered that we have repeatedly warned the men of America that they were slumbering over a volcano, which when it breaks forth will engulf every male man in the country.

After reading the above "extracts" we lost no time in visiting the Great Astrologist, Madame Rootentoot, at Bull Run; where, after gazing through a black bottle, for a few moments, towards the sky, we sank into a dreamy trance and again saw the future, as it is to be. Titusville had increased in size and was scarcely recognizable, so different was its appearance.

A match game of base ball was in progress between the "Mary Ann Club" of Titusville, and the "Tilters" of Oil City. The contestants were fine muscular-looking ladies, with bronzed countenances, and in some cases heavy beards. The batting was excellent, as most of the club had experience in wielding clubs and broomsticks over their husbands, but the pitching displayed all the characteristics of a female throw; the pitcher using both hands, threw the ball backwards as often as the other way.

The spectators were numerous and consisted mostly of handsome young men, attired in costly silks and satins, and who in their charming little jockey hats and elevated waterfalls, presented a gay appearance. Some of the young men still clung to their old habiliments, but they were miserable looking objects. The majority had accepted the situation and were resplendent in the profusion of hoop skirts, tilters, curls, ribbons and laces; in fact everything had changed, and woman had found her "sphere." At Carter's, where we went to purchase a "tilterfly," we found lady clerks selling clothing, &c, while the former proprietor had moved into other rooms and gone to manufacturing artificial flowers. Losee's store was filled with ladies out buying their fall overcoats and hats, while Losee and his companions we found occupying quiet quarters as "dressmakers." Leaving our order for a more antique dress (i. e., more antique than anybody's else), we went up to Cardinio's to get shaved, but upon stepping up to the glass found our heavy moustache had disappeared, and the chairs were filled with a lot of laughing schoolgirls who were cultivating beards and getting "fixed up" to take their beaux to the social that evening. Young lady barbers handled the razor, and so dexterous were they we feared we might lose our head, if we tarried, and so departed.—The Chief of Police, Captain Belinda Benzine, was busy at the corner of Spring and Franklin streets, assisting unprotected gentlemen over the crossing. The post office was closed, as under the new regime no males were allowed in the office. Stepping into Cashler's to get measured for a watch and chain we found several young ladies were busy taking the measurement of watches, exhibiting jewelry sets to gentlemen, &c

The hotels were all under the rule of landlordesses and lady clerks. Major Mills seemed to be running a sewing machine for a living, while a neat but not gaudy sign on Pine street said: "Williams & Stowell, Milliners and Corset Makers"

The HERALD office was entirely reconstructed, and instead of the tables being covered with scraps, political extracts, &c., the articles clipped referred mostly to "the advancement of woman" The editress sat in her easy chair, smoking, while occasionally the "devil," a blushing young lady of 15, would call for copy.

The streets were filled with beautiful men out promenading in short street dresses, while groups of ladies stood upon the corners remarking up on the toilets, and raising their hats as they recognized some pretty male acquaintance.

Oil was still produced, but we failed to recognize any of the old operators. The two Misses Paraffine, were putting down wells on Church Run, and most of the Petroleum Companies were officered entirely by women

The following advertisements and business cards show the difference in the state of affairs:

"Miss Cecelia Crabapple, Harness Maker, at McCrum's old stand"

"Important to oil women. Try Roberts torpedo."

"Fifty ladies' heavy overcoat—just received at Strauss & Stetthemer's"

"Wanted—A smart business woman as partner, in the barrel business—one who understands hooping preferred."

"Wanted—An intelligent, and good looking young man as nurse, for fourteen small children, all under twelve months of age."

"A competent young man wants a situation as gentleman's waiting maid," &c.

"A very smart man wants a situation as Chambermaid; is quick at figures, and is perfectly docile."

This is quite enough to show the people that it is time they were preparing for the change which is sure to take place. Young men, get your bonnets made. Old men, get out your knitting, for the ladies are learning to smoke, to chop wood, do the voting, &c. Man's sphere will still be a useful one, although entirely domestic.

International Copyright.

Mr. Parton's able and somewhat trenchant article on the subject of "International Copyright," in the Atlantic Monthly, has attracted a great deal of attention and excited much comment in England. It presented the facts in the case with such clearness and force that a subject which has been discussed for at least a generation was seen in a new light. To Americans it revealed the extent of the injustice suffered by our own authors and publishers by reason of the deluge of cheap reprints and importations, and by the lack of an English market for our best books. To Englishmen it showed that we are as great losers as they by the absence of the legal protection to which the authors of each of the two countries are entitled.

The discussion has drawn out a letter from Mr. Dion Boucicault to the London Telegraph, which is sufficiently sharp. Mr. Boucicault only takes a partial view of the subject, but he tells some interesting facts, suggested probably by his experience as theatrical manager and play-writer He complains that the English government is as derelict as our own in protecting authors. His own "Colleen Bawn" and "Octoroon"—written and played from manuscript in this country—were defiantly stolen and published in England. He also reminds Englishmen that "the tone of indignant remonstrance which we have adopted toward the United States may provoke them to remind us of our own dealings with France."—Under the present copyright treaty with that country France has been robbed "persistently and undisguisedly."

It seems that French plays can be translated and produced in England, without paying the slightest tribute to the dramatist. Of course the English playwrights are at a fearful disadvantage. Mr. Boucicault says:

"The defect in the treaty was pointed out by the French government to Lord Palmerston when he was Foreign Minister; he acknowledged the error, regretted it, and left it there. Two years ago I brought this matter before the then government, and urged the amendment of the convention. It was referred to the Lords of Trade, and I received a polite reply from Lord Clarendon, by way of Mr. Layard, to the effect that the grievance was very shocking; but their lordships were of opinion that there were various reasons which render it inexpedient at present,' &c., &c. Baffled by the whig ministry, we waited until the conservatives arrived. Come, thought I, the tories maintain themselves by liberal measures, as the liberals baffle opposition by conservative concessions, and so I hopefully addressed Lord Derby's administration. A reply was returned per Lord Stanley, by way of Mr. Egerton, on the same indefinite office model previously afforded by Lorn Clarendon Hereupon we gathered into one movement the authors and composers of France, the authors of England, the managers of theatres, publishers, in fact, almost every individual interested in the question, and launched petitions and memorials one after the other, backed by another vigorous demand from the French government, accompanied by a threat in the French press that if England persisted in her barefaced robbery the treaty should be rescinded. At last we extorted a very reserved expression from the Lords of Trade that they would see about it. I take it, sir, to be a piece of unblushing effrontery that we should cry "Stop thief!" to America, when our hands are literally in the pockets of our neighbor France."

The London News discusses the question from another standpoint It believes that we who have always shown ourselves so ready to protect our own industry, even to a ruinous extent, and by unwise methods, will not much longer refuse what is demanded as a right by our own authors, while it is due to those of England. It says:

"Give English authors a right of property in their works in the United States, and American authors will find their property become valuable at once They will be relieved from the unequal terms on which they now compete with English writers. They will find their profession rapidly becoming a remunerative one, while no injustice or injury whatever is done to the American people. The price of English books may be a little higher, but even that is not necessary; and American books, secure of a larger sale, may be considerably reduced in price. And the nation which is so proud of its youthful vigor, of its vast territory, of its republican government, and of its expanding wealth, will soon have a national literature to be proud of too"

The New York Evening Post alludes to another aspect of the subject, viz, the advantage of cheap editions of standard works. There is no question that the benefits arising from the wide circulation of these editions, which have paid no royalty to the author, have been very great. In Germany this is likely to be immediately realized, for on the 9th of this month the exclusive copyright in the works of the great German poets, Schiller, Goethe, Wieland and Herder, which was owned by the Stuttgart publishing house of J. G. Cotta, expired. Great preparations were making for the contemporaneous issue of several cheap rival editions of these works. An impulse of activity entirely unprecedented has been given to the German book trade by the anticipated removal of all restrictions from the publication of the books which all German readers want to possess. It is a satisfaction to know, however, that the debt of justice to the authors and their heirs has been paid.

Early Closing of Stores.

The project of closing the stores at an early hour, for the benefit of both employers and clerks, seems to meet with general approval among our business men, as appears by the annexed agreement. Over thirty business establishments are represented among the signers. Only two of the leading houses have failed to endorse the paper, owing to the absence of the proprietors from the city when it was circulated. It is believed however, that they will cordially join in the movement. Customers and the public generally will take notice that the contemplated arrangement will go into effect next week. It is confidently believed that this movement will draw the young into our literary society, give greater activity and interest to its exercises during the ensuing winter, induce numbers to avail themselves of its excellent library, and add largely to the collection.

AGREEMENT.

On and after Monday, the 25th inst, the undersigned agree to close their respective places of business at 7 30 p m, (Saturdays excepted) unless there be a customer whose purchases are not then complete:

REPUBLICAN LEGISLATIVE CAUCUS.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, who was in Pittsburgh last week, telegraphed as follows relative to the Republican Legislative caucus held at the Monongahela House:

At a caucus of Republican members of the Legislature, after a pretty complete count of noses, it was determined to support Elisha W. Davis, of Philadelphia, for the Speakership of the House. His election is conceded A majority were in favor of General W. W Irwin for the State Treasurership, though the contest for this position is very close, and the friends of Senator Connell are as sanguine as the friends of General Irwin Gordon B. Berry, of Crawford, is running a very fast train for the Clerkship of the House, though ex-Adjutant General Russell's friends are equally sanguine. There were thirty-six members of the House and Senate present in the caucus at the Monongahela House; of these twenty-eight were for Irwin for Treasurer, five for Senator Connell, and three for Colonel John H. Taggart. Most of the members were from Western Pennsylvania; but there were seven here from Philadelphia, of whom Irwin had five; and three from Lancaster, all of whom are for Taggart.

The Great Walking Match at Pithole Yesterday.

The great walking match from the Chase House, at Pithole, to the Farmers' Hotel, on the Titusville plank road, came off yesterday at two p. m. The pedestrian, Mr. Bower, was to make the distance (four miles) in sixty minutes, or forfeit the oysters for the Chase House.

The parties making the bet, were Messrs. Bowman and McNair on one side, and Bower and Patterson on the other. Long before the appointed time for the start, the streets were filled with a crowd of people, consisting of footmen, horsemen and men in carriages. As the moment for starting drew near, the enthusiasm of the multitude broke into long and vociferous cheering, and as the watches of the judges pointed to the hour of two, Bower started on his march. He was attired neatly, but gaudily, in brown-colored pantaloons and vest, a straw hat upon his head, and heavy boots upon his feet. Striking an easy gait the pedestrian let out, followed by a multitude on foot, horseback, in carriages and vehicles of every description. Dawson Centre was reached in 13¼ minutes, and save a delicate tinge of pink upon the cheeks of the "walkist," he showed no signs of fatigue. Going up the hill beyond Dawson, the pedestrian jerked off his boots and took to his stocking feet, amid the cheers of the crowd, and to show that he had not lost any of his old sprightliness, jumped up, kicked his heels together, but slipping, came down like a thousand of brick upon that portion of his body usually concealed by the coat tails. Many ambitious individuals tried to keep pace with Mr. B, who occasionally broke into a "dog trot," but they were mostly glad to return to their horses and carriages, although one or two did walk the entire distance.

As the Farmers' Hotel was neared the excitement and enthusiasm of the crowd grew intense. From the derricks on the Bean Farm came the shouts and cheers of the workmen. Every window was filled with faces, and the roofs of houses in the vicinity covered with anxious spectators. Even the animals caught the infection. Small dogs ran to and fro (principally fro) barking loudly; sheep in the pasture went to racing, as if it were the month of May instead of November.

It soon became evident that Mr. Bower would win the race. Although perspiring freely he still took a rapid gait, and finally breaking into a canter, entered the doors of the Farmers' Hotel, at a jump, having accomplished the entire distance in forty nine minutes.

When the nature of the road is taken into consideration—nearly all up hill and in a slippery condition—not to mention the lack of training on the part of the walker, the feat is by no means insignificant, and Mr. Bower is entitled to an exalted place among the names of pedestrians.

A feast of reason and a flow of soul
Followed in the evening—at Pithole.

Mr. Bower's feet were not in the least swollen, and he feels confident that he could have made the trip in less time. It is proposed to start him after Weston, parties here being willing to bet that Bower can start from Pithole and overtake Weston now before he enters Chicago

Taking everything into consideration, the match was a success, and the presence of a goodly number of the best citizens of Pithole prevented any outbreak or disturbance on the party betting against Mr. B. No signs of a mob—the whole thing was conducted on the square, and when another comes off may we be there to see. The HERALD was the only paper represented and employed a special corps of telegraph operators for the occasion.

PATENTS ISSUED.—The following patents were issued to Western Pennsylvania from the United States Patent Office, for the week ending November 12th, 1867, each bearing that date:

T. J. Lockhart and Josiah Locke, of Pittsburgh, for improvement in insulators for lightning rods.

Biddle Arthur, of Pittsburgh, for hot air furnaces.

John R. Cameron, of Pittsburgh, for improvement in air engine.

Allan Neilson, of Allegheny City, for improved washing machine.

Samuel Gieslger, of Lawrenceville, for improved car coupling.

R. D McCreery, of Oil City, for improved mode of obtaining motive power from petroleum and other oils.

John E. Fry, of Johnstown, for improved mold for casting steel ingots.

Frank Ketchas, of Monongahela City, for improvement in sleep trough.

Joseph Magner, of New Castle, for improvement in well tubs.

J. P. Scott, of Lewisburg, for improved school desk and seat.

Israel Kepler of Corry, for improvement in fire places.

J. Warren Cater, of Trappe, for improved ash sifters

Great Panic in Chicago.

The papers of that city speak of a panic among the flour dealers as the harvest has turned out better than "statistics" prophesied. Among those who have taken advantage of this fall is the wide-awake firm of H.L. Hershberg & Co. They have just received a large supply of the finest grades of flour and are selling it lower than any other house in the city. Every pound of flour guaranteed to give satisfaction nov22d&wtf

NEW WELL.—A well was struck last Monday on the Patterson Farm, on Bull Run, near the old Crocker well. Yesterday afternoon the water was exhausted, when it commenced to produce oil at the rate of seventy-five barrels per day. The working interest is owned by Messrs Johnston & Witeman.

LOCAL NOTICES.

Elastic Sponge.—Strong & Hoyt, 145 State St, Rochester, N. Y., have an exclusive agency for selling this article manufactured up into mattresses, pillows, chair and carriage cushions. It is only a short time since sponge has been used for this purpose. The sponge is cut into small pieces and chemically treated, and in this way has been found to be better and in this way uses them any other article adapted for those purposes. We saw a bale of it weighing one pound, compressed and held into a space three inches in thickness by six in length and four inches in breadth, when cut apart expand on the moisture to over three feet in length. None of the insect tribe will harbor in it. Its wonderful elasticity, unrivalled cleanliness, combine to place it in the front rank for such purposes as it is now used. Library of Universal Information.

THE NEW

AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA:

A Popular Dictionary of General Knowledge.

EDITED BY

GEORGE RIPLEY AND CHARLES A. DANA,

AIDED BY A NUMEROUS SELECT CORPS OF WRITERS, IN ALL BRANCHES OF SCIENCE, ART AND LITERATURE.

In 16 large volumes, 8vo.

750 double-column pages in each volume.

The leading claims to public consideration which the New American Cyclopædia possesses may be thus briefly stated:

"1. It surpasses all other works in the fullness and ability of the articles relating to the United States.

"2. No other work contains so many reliable biographies of the leading men of this and other nations. In this respect it is far superior even to the more bulky Encyclopædia Britannica.

"3. The best minds in this country have been employed in enriching its pages with the latest data, and the most recent discoveries in every branch of manufactures, mechanics, and general science.

"4. It is a library in itself, where every topic is treated, and where information can be gleaned which will enable a student, if he is so disposed, to consult other authorities, thus affording him an invaluable key to knowledge.

"5. It is finally printed, with readable type, on good paper, and contains a most copious index.

"6. This the only work which gives anything approaching correct descriptions of cities and towns of America, or embraces reliable statistics showing the wonderful growth of all sections."

Every one, that reads, every one that mingles in society, is constantly meeting with allusions to subjects on which he needs and desires further information. In conversation, in trade, in professional life, on the farm, in the family, practical questions are continually arising, which no man, well read, or not, can always satisfactorily answer. If the titles for reference are at hand, they are consulted, and not only is the curiosity gratified, and stock of knowledge increased, but perhaps information is gained and ideas are suggested that will directly contribute to the business success of the party concerned.

A Cyclopædia is pre-eminently the work for our country and generation. This is the age of steam. We can use time to grope among a hundred different works for every little fact required, without the certainty of finding it at last. With a Cyclopædia, on almost every conceivable subject, and having its topics alphabetically arranged, not a moment is lost. The matter in question is found at once, digested, condensed, stripped of all that is irrelevant and unnecessary, and varnished by a comparison of the best authorities. Moreover, while only men of fortune can collect a library complete in all the departments of knowledge, a Cyclopædia meets in itself for purposes of reference at least a thousand volumes, is within the reach of all—the clerk, the merchant, the professional man, the farmer, the mechanic. In a country like ours, where the laborer may be called to represent a nation, requiring intelligence and general information, the value of such a work cannot be over-estimated.

COL. E. A. L. ROBERTS,

General Superintendent, Titusville, Pennsylvania.

OFFICE AT THE RED PLANING MILL.

Heretofore we have in our circulars, alluded to a series of experiments being made with Nitro Glycerine and other explosives. We now announce that we have succeeded, even beyond our most sanguine expectations as regards the safe and handling, also the unprecedented force and power manifested by a skillful combination wherein the size of the Torpedo is lessened and the force many times multiplied and are now prepared to operate on wells with any of the above named explosives—either with our improved combination or our old Combination Torpedo, which has a recorded utility too well known to need mention here.

8th. Nitro-Glycerine, equal to 60 lbs. powder.....$150
15th. " " " 125 lbs. powder..... 200
Combination equal to 100 lbs. powder..... 150
Improved combination, eq. to 150 lbs. powder..... 200
Double combination, equal to 200 to 1000 lbs. powder.....$200 to 500

CAUTION.—The public is cautioned against employing any but the regularly authorized agents of this Company, since their patent, according to the recent decision of the Commissioner of Patents for the United States, covers the use of the Torpedo and all other explosive materials for oil wells, and the use of such materials by other parties is a direct infringement, of which rights and we shall hold land or working interests to a strict accountability for such infringements.
